

CASE STUDY

Linsco is proud to announce a strategic partnership with Winvic Construction and Nottingham City Council, dedicated to upskilling local talent.

Karlin started working on site as a Labourer, due to his commitment and hard work he was granted an opportunity to undergo a Slinger Signaller course, whilst working at Crown Place, in Nottingham.

This collaboration underlines Linsco's commitment to social value, demonstrating how we actively invest in our employee's growth and skillset. We've worked closely with Winvic in the past, and this initiative demonstrates the effort to help employees like Karlin ensuring they thrive in their construction career path.

Stephen Gascoyne (Project Manager) at Winvic:

"It's great that companies, such as Winvic, collaborate with their supply chain and local council to enable schemes like this, Winvic play a pivotal role in facilitating this growth. Empowering local talent is a shared success, and I look forward to more achievements like this within the industry."
